

A good walk spoiled - I think not.

I am a keen golfer - those who know me well would agree that this is the case. I am, in fact, so keen, that I have created my own special golf course. I invite you to join me and play it this Christmas in a stroke play competition. In order to do so, you will need the standard implements (golf clubs, shoes, fashion disaster trousers), several golf balls and a bag, but also some more specialised equipment and skills. A map would help as my golf course is spread far and wide - the walks between green and tee can be somewhat long. However, there are rewards; somewhere in England I have concealed a box which contains a golf ball. If you can find it then you can claim your beer at the bar and maybe also win some other prizes. The prize fund this year has been generously donated by the LogicaCMG Sports and Social Club for the usual categories.

If you can work out my score, that will help you – it is described on every hole. If you can play the course as well as I can, that might also help you. If you can find each of the holes - then that might help you even more...of course, you need to abide by the rules. Your tee time is already booked, you can hit some balls on the range first, but you must complete your round by Midnight on the 18th January 2007.

All entrants must work through a LogicaCMG captain to be eligible for a prize, although scorecards are welcome from other teams. Any legible format of entry is acceptable, eg: email to steve.hames@logiacmg.com or snail mail to: GMS/6, 51-53 Great Marlborough Street, London W1F 7JT. If you reach the site and the box is missing, please try to contact me on 01753 882313 - it is possible the box may have been disturbed by someone unconnected with this quiz.

A copy of this document can be found on the Armchair Treasure Hunt web site: <http://public.logiacmg.com/~ath>. Good luck and play well. Oh and stoke up on a hearty breakfast at the clubhouse if you think this is a team game. Steve Hames.

- 1/2 cup new red potatoes -- cooked & cubed
- 1 Tbsp butter
- 1/8 tsp. garlic powder
- 1 green onion -- sliced
- 1/4 lb. sausage -- browned & drained well
- 1/4 lb. Canadian Bacon or regular bacon
- 1/2 each red & green bell peppers -- diced
- 3 eggs -- beaten
- Black pepper to taste
- Dash of Spanish paprika
- 1/2 cup Cheddar cheese -- shredded
- 1/2 cup Monterey Jack cheese -- shredded
- 1/4 cup milk

In a non-stick skillet, place butter, garlic powder and cooked potatoes over medium heat for 1 to 2 minutes. In a separate bowl, add black pepper, paprika and milk to beaten eggs and pour mixture over the potatoes. Scramble eggs, constantly lifting with fork to keep eggs fluffy and to ensure even cooking throughout. Top with sausage, ham, green onion slices, bell pepper and cheese. Cover and cook about 1 to 2 minutes to allow cheese to melt. Serve over flour tortilla in warm plate and add salsa to side.

The first tee shot – that glorious moment of anticipation and also sheer naked fear. Will I embarrass myself in front of my partners? Will I flub it, shank it, slice it or nail it down the middle? Well today I hit one that faded into the semi, so I thought a Gerry Adams was in order. That one was fine, but I found the first, knocked it up to the side of the green and picked up the provisional. My partner asked me to lift the ball as it was on his line, so I did and cleaned it. I then replaced it and promptly chipped in! Pleased, I wrote down my score – a good save - and moved on to the next tee.

Many a heart is aching,
 If you could read them all,
 Many the hopes that have vanished,
 After the ball.

Getting into my stride now. A fine drive, nice and straight, getting past the bunker on the right, leaving a long second. The green is well guarded by two deep bunkers, so I lay up with a spoon. A deft pitch is required, but no! I whistle "At the sign of the swinging cymbal", mutter under my breath and count my pop pickers. So now I have to execute a very long putt.....not again! That was a Salman Rushdie, so now I have to sink a short putt. Rescued.....

My score on this hole reminded me of a tale told to me by an old friend, Fred Ricketts, of his time in the army. He was posted to Fort George near Inverness in Scotland. Of course as a keen golfer, he played regularly on the local course and it was there that he sometimes encountered an eccentric and fiery colonel. One of the latter's peculiarities was that instead of shouting 'Fore' to warn of an impending drive, he preferred to whistle a descending minor third. This little musical tag stayed with Fred and germinated in his mind when he later changed his name to go marching.

*The ball no question makes of Ayes and Noes,
But Here or There as strikes the player goes.*

The next hole is in a wild and desolate place, but one of inspiring beauty, to be sure. A long hole, unusually playing downwind today. The caddies have a saying here – “it’ll take three good shots to get on in two today, sir!”. Anyway I did succeed easily today in the long hitting, despite the wispy links rough. A bit of confusion with whose turn it was to putt first, but two putts later, I was in the cup for a smooth swallow. Very satisfying !

Chapter 7

I played this hole adventurously, but quite well, I thought. As I had to wait some time to get to the next tee, I worked out how my score could be represented:

The first prime number times the number of tailors of Tooley Street, added to the number of sons of Aymon, but taking away the Ulster counties.

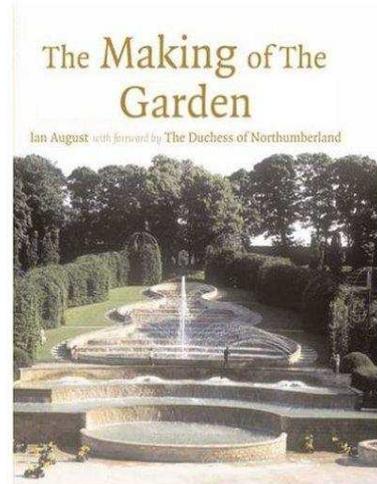

It was then that I noticed that the hole and the course were beginning to seem a bit unusual in their signage.

Again, the fourball in front are very slow, so I had plenty of time to lose myself in thoughts. I had played well, hitting perfect shots, almost perfect shots but also a few rank bad shots. It amused me to think that my score on this hole equalled the second perfect number less the fourth almost perfect number, divided by the first perfect number and multiplied by the first deficient number.

*They have slain the Earl of Murray
And laid him on the green*

A beautiful seaside hole this one. Magnificent views, but the wind is BLOWING! I decide to take a 3 iron into the wind. A lovely strike, but the wind pushes it into the front right hand bunker. My partner tops his into the tussocks in front of the green – a horrid place. I tell him, "You have no shot at all. If I were you, I would declare the ball unplayable." He agrees and takes a penalty drop, then knocks it up onto the green. I go up to my ball in the bunker, check that it is mine (without touching it), and take my stance. Right before I was about to ground my club, the ball moves slightly. I replace it and splash out onto the green, to about a foot from the hole. I mark the ball, clean it and replace it. It stays in place. I take my stance and am just about to ground the putter when the ball rolls down the slope and into the hole. Whacko!

I was irritated by my failure on the previous hole. I took out my driver and the violence of my assault upon the ball was wondrous to behold. I estimate that the club-head entered the turf some eleven inches behind the ball, ploughing a thickish slice of rural Nottinghamshire to curl clear over the teed ball, which was gently dislodged from its perch. I proceeded to lose my cool.

I snatched the turf, tearing it from the grip of terra firma (Rule 23 loose impediments), threw down the detached divot into the scrape and stamped it down (rule 13). I then picked up the ball (rule 18-2), which was when sanity returned. I replaced the ball and then sliced into the ditch on the right. I dropped out of the ditch and played up into the greenside bunker.

The ball was lying under a leaf, which I removed. A delicate splash shot moved the ball about 2 feet. My eyes glazed over in rage and this time the sand cleared the green! Unfortunately the ball stayed exactly where it was. A third bunker shot then deposited me onto the safety of the green. Two more putts and I managed to salvage some sort of score.
